

yrs of age and a small girl about 10 or 11 years old. She often brought customers to his store and in German would tell him to charge over the regular price for the article so she could make commission on customer. She used to drive a horse and go out into the country parts around Trenton and buy up furniture. Silverstein said that her husband appeared to be much older than she and that she was the complete master of the household. He could identify her if necessary.

Mrs. Nickolas Stillwell of 402 South Broad St., where she conducts a grocery store, sold Mrs. Easton some furniture and a young man and an older man came and took the furniture away in a wagon.

Mr. Farley, who conducts a drugstore on Market and Broad streets, knew Mrs. Easton well. Mrs. Carey

Mrs. Carey, who conducted a candy store at 338 South Broad St., now living at 11 Chalmers St., knew Mrs. Easton who came into her store on many occasions. Mrs. Easton never had much to say and seemed to be a quiet woman of neat appearance.

Dr. Maddon of 338 South Broad St., Trenton, remembers Mrs. Easton but could give no further information.
